Relief Society Wheat

The following is a speech of Hon. M. H. Welling of Utah, in the House of Representatives, June 7, 1918.

Mr. Chairman, I feel very grateful indeed for the courtesy of the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Fess) and the committee for yielding to me at this time. I am glad to have the time now, before a technical discussion of the bill for the rehabilitation of wounded soldiers is taken up, because I have no intention of discussing that legislation other than to say it will receive my hearty support.

Mr. Chairman, the House has frequently during the progress of the war paused for a moment in its regular business to express its appreciation of some incident which has distinguished a community in its contribution to our war work. I ask the indulgence of the House this morning to refer briefly to such an event.

My state is known as the home of the Mormon people. In a former generation it was the popular thing here and elsewhere to speak in terms of condemnation of their religion, as well as to question their patriotism and their loyalty to our country.

However much men may have disagreed in the past about these questions, I think it will be conceded that no man has yet successfully challenged the broad statesmanship and breadth of vision of Brigham Young, one of the great leaders of these people.

The dauntless pioneer led into a trackless desert the men and women who, under his direction, laid securely the foundation of a great state. I rise this morning to speak of one very inconspicuous and minor evidence of this leadership. Brigham Young fostered and encouraged as one of the auxiliary organizations of the church the Woman's Relief Society. With the main purpose of that organization—its charitable and educational work—I am now concerned. These women were advised as one of their minor activities to store wheat and it is of this rather unusual activity I wish to speak.

In the early days of Utah's history and in the humble beginning of the Relief Society, these women gleaned the harvest fields in order that no precious head of grain should be lost. Wheat was so precious to the pioneers that it was used as a medium of exchange. It was the standard of value by which other commodities were measured. They had little or no other currency. My own mother has related to me more than once her association with and cheerful participation in this work of gleaned the precious yellow grain.

Later on by purchase and donation these women added more rapidly to their store of wheat. As the stock grew it was moved from the small wooden granaries belonging to the local relief society organizations to great steel and cement elevators constructed for that purpose and controlled by the women themselves. From the beginning these women from the very beginning these women were taught that she time would come when every available pound of wheat and starvation. It has remained a strongly entrenched tradition with the women of this organization, and they believe it to be true today.

This spring, in April, there were in the elevators belonging to the Mormon women of Utah and other adjacent western states 205,513 bushels of first class milling wheat. Last month these devoted women felt that the time had come for them to use their precious savings of more than 60 years. Through the pres-dency of the Mormon church every pound of this wheat was tendered to and accepted by the United States Food Administration for the use of the starving women and children among our allies, and for the use of our soldiers and sailors in the army and navy of the United States. (Applause.)

Mr. Chairman, I had not thought of mentioning this incident until yesterday when I received a letter from Mr. Herbert Hoover expressing the appreciation of his administration for the assistance rendered. Mr. Hoover's letter and my reply thereto are as follows:

United States Food Administration
Washington, D. C., June 3,
Hon. William H. Welling,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Welling. The recent action of the women of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Utah, in releasing wheat and flour for the use of our allies and our own soldiers abroad is so commendable, that I wish to drop you a line merely to assure you of my appreciation of this service performed by the church.

It has given me pleasure to write about this matter to Joseph F. Smith, Anthon H. Lund and C. W. Penrose first presidency, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and to assure them of the renewed courage we get from this generous act, both because it yields a substantial addition of food sorely needed by our hard pressed allies and also because the example is felt far outside the field of its immediate application.

Yours faithfully,
HERBERT HOOVER.
June 6, 1918.

Hon. Herbert Hoover,
United States Food Administration,
Washington, D. C.

My dear Mr. Hoover: May I thank you most sincerely for your favor of June 3, announcing the tender of a large quantity of wheat by the women of the Mormon church to the war needs of our Nations and our allies.

I join with you in the thought that this action is a manifestation of patriotic service to our country in this crisis which deserves all praise.

Thanking you for your letter and assuring you of my desire to cooperate with you in your arduous duties, I have the honor to be,
Very sincerely yours,
M. H. WELLING.

This 12,331,080 pounds of wheat so tendered to the cause of human liberty will not win the war, but it will save the lives of thousands who suffer for lack of bread to eat.

These women have with solemn pride given their sons to fight for freedom of mankind. They now turn over to the uses of humanity these precious savings of more than a generation, to bind up the broken hearted and bring back to life the helpless victims of this pitiless strife.

TO PREVENT BEICING

Make a regular habit of eating slowly, masticate your food thoroughly, and you may have no further trouble. If you should, take one of Chamberlain's Tablets immediately after supper.

ALL HELP TO PRODUCE FOOD

Speaking of food—how much of what you eat do you help to produce by your own work? Farms need labor. The difficulty is not an insufficiency of actual man power. There are plenty of men to supply the farms with help. But the man power is applied to other things, and the farms will not be adequately supplied with help unless men turn farms in their country during the rush periods of cultivation and harvest.

If we were not at war you might feel free to disregard this as your personal duty. But we are at war; this is a war need, and you are not free to disregard it.

It is the duty of every strong man of farm experience or of farm aptitude who is not now engaged in work to which his personal attention is constantly indispensable, to go to farms in the agricultural territory adjacent to his town when farm labor needs are urgent, and help produce the food crops which are essential to war winning.

You eat every day. Some man's hard work produced that food. Our soldiers in France must eat and somebody's hard work produces that food. If you are so situated that you can help produce this food it is your war duty to do so.

Lay off your present job or get away from your present business for a few days or a few weeks as you are needed. You'll lose money and weight. You'll gain blisters, sore muscles and a clear conscience.

THE SUGAR BEET ACREAGE

At a time when there is urgent need of more sugar on both sides of the Atlantic, it is regrettable from the viewpoint of national advantage that the acreage devoted to sugar beets should show a decline. This conditions was made practically inevitable, however, by high prices commanded by other crops which compete with sugar beets for farmers attention. These prices could not be matched in case of beets under restrictions placed upon price of sugar, although it is true that when account is taken of the valuable products of the sugar beet and its beneficial influence upon other crops grown in rotation with it, beet cultivation remains one of the most profitable operations in which the farmer can engage. This fact was not widely enough appreciated, however, to offset the immediate pecuniary attractions of other crops which can be grown with less labor.

Another factor that exercised appreciable influence in restricting acreage in some of the principal beet growing states was the organized propaganda which, while conducted as a campaign for higher prices for beets operated to the discouragement of sugar production. Its authors can enjoy the questionable satisfaction of having succeeded in depriving American consumers of a considerable amount of sugar which will be badly needed before next spring—
Facts About Sugar.

The people of the west are not yet fully awake to the magnitude and value of the sugar beet industry. It should be encouraged in every manner possible as it is a national necessity and the greatest developer of our farm lands.

The agitator who discourages sugar beet production is a menace to the community.

BEWARE THE SHYSTER

One of the things that the friends of our soldiers will have to guard against is the attempts of firms of lawyers to profit in the collection from the government of back pay, insurance money and allotments. Cases have already arisen where Washington attorneys have found access to official records and endeavored to exact fees for services in obtaining what is guaranteed the soldier and his relatives by law. Minnesota has had called to his attention a case involving the collection of back pay due a soldier at the time he was killed in France. The man's relatives were written to and urged to put the claim in the hands of a Washington law firm. Laws have been passed prohibiting fees above a very nominal amount for prosecuting cases before the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, but in the collection of back pay no such limitation exists. In the case cited by Mr. Knutson 20 per cent was suggested as a fee. The congressman is much aroused in the matter and intends to sift it to the bottom in the attempt to find out who is responsible for furnishing the lawyers information that enables them to get in touch with possible claimants.
